Aims and ethos

King Edward's School educates boys between the ages of 11 and 18. The school's overarching aim is 'to educate and inspire boys to take on the challenges of the world and lead lives of significant contribution and fulfilment'.

In order to realise our aim, we are committed to inspiring our boys to achieve more than they imagined possible through and a rich and broad educational programme, and the quality of learning and care we provide – both within and outside the classroom.

Our vision is to be a school at the forefront of international education, enabling bright boys from any background to become inspirational young men who will contribute both locally and globally. The International Baccalaureate and its philosophy is central to our ethos.

Within our hugely diverse community, we seek to challenge each other to think beyond the conventional and create the best environment for our boys to develop and become:

- Inspiring – energising influencers, who are active and creative, and help others to become more confident.
- Curious – true learners, who have a love of learning for its own sake, ask the right questions, and are thoughtful and reflective.
- Adaptable – future leaders, who understand how the world is changing, excel in any situation and are resourceful and resilient.
- Generous – young men who value the contributions of others, and are open and respectful.
